

New Men and New Women

We are now well into the time known by astrologers as The Aquarian Age. The planet goes through the same cycle of twelve houses of planetary influence that affect us as individuals. The era that we are coming from is the Piscean age and there is a marked difference in these two energies. The most marked is we come from a time of Paternal Control to a time of Feminine Power. This means that in the past we lived with controls, rules, regulations and we were quite happy to have someone organise our lives and set up boundaries for us. Now we are in a time of self responsibility and equality, a time to connect to the God within ourselves and not feel obliged to be under the influenced of a controlling God. I believe this will also herald a time of peace for the world once the turmoil of change is over. This new energy will affect us as individuals and men will start to show more feminine traits (don't worry just traits!) such as being more compassionate, feeling free to cry if they want to, to using their intuition instead of logic only and so on. Women will feel less need to emulate men in the work place and feel more determined than ever to be treated as equals. In the home this can be difficult for men to accept their new assertive partners and for women to accept that their partner may wish to be a house father rather than a hunter gatherer. The solution to these changes is to be accepting, less judgemental, less critical and controlling. Allow these new ways to be a wonderful opportunity for us to evolve into the great times ahead rather than try to hold onto the patterns of the past.
